WINTER 2015

'This support group has changed my life.'

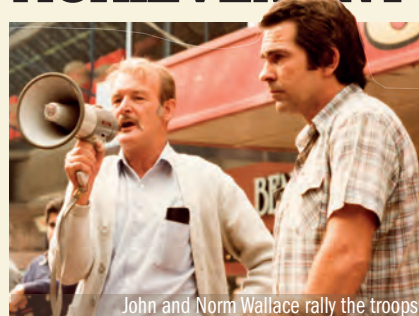

As we shared lunch with Andy, Juan and other participants of the Brain Tumour Support Service, they told us about their experience of the support group they attend each week. There was a strong sense of optimism and enthusiasm within the group.

The service was established in 2007 through a partnership between the JCMFund and Austin Health. Since then it has played a leading role in improving the experience of patients and families affected by the diagnosis of primary malignant brain tumour.

This year we have funded the expansion of the service to respond to increasing demand. Each month, the support service hosts up to 20 participants. In the past twelve months, 165 families have benefited from support programs, education and community engagement.

Under the guidance of Di Legge, Brain Tumour Support officer at the Austin Hospital, the service continues to evolve, the last year has been no exception.

NINE YEARS OF SOLID ACHIEVEMENT

TOTAL FUNDS GRANTED 2006 -2015

$648,508

The JCMF was set up following John's untimely death as the result of a brain tumour in 2006. John, a well-respected official of the BLF and CFMEU, is fondly remembered as a leader of construction workers through good times and bad. 'John's inspirational leadership was based on integrity, compassion, humour and toughness. He led by example.'

Reaching for their dreams

Matt and Bill, year 10 students at Korumburra Secondary College, were awarded JCMF scholarships in 2015. Our support has relieved the financial pressure of purchasing a new laptop for their studies, a requirement for many high school students these days.

'I've really enjoyed being able to use my notebook to investigate and design products that will increase my own skills as well as benefit others in the school,' says Bill, who is keen to pursue a career in the fabrication industry.

He has already designed and built an outdoor table tennis table, plus trolleys and storage mechanisms for the school's PE department.

Matt has a keen interest in the music industry and is the school's resident DJ. He provides the entertainment at swimming carnivals and sports days, creating a great atmosphere for fellow students. He is also an integral member of the school rock band, performing at many school functions and assemblies.

By being able to purchase a laptop through the JCMF scholarship, Matt has expanded his music skills and kept up with industry practice.

'The JCMF scholarship is helping these students to aspire to reach their dreams, as it has done for many others in the past,' says Linda Jennings, the College's Middle School Coordinator.

Earlier this year the JCMF established a partnership with Cricket Victoria as a tribute to the late John Loh, a highly regarded official of the CFMEU. Lohy, as he was fondly known, enjoyed cricket and believed in its ability to create a sense of community, especially among young people.

The JCMF granted $2,000 to Lohy's Little Legends, which helped establish cricket clinics for primary school-aged kids.

'This support has helped more kids participate in north-west Melbourne than ever before,' says Daniel Trevillian of Cricket Victoria. 'This is great, because our school involvement targets areas of disadvantage and high multicultural concentration.'
